

Jody Jannisse

Director, Global Travel and Corporate Aviation, Gap Inc.

Jody Jannisse has been in the Corporate Travel industry for over 25 years, in various roles at several travel management companies as well as being a Global Travel Manager in two different companies. She is a native San Franciscan and has spent her entire career in the Bay Area.

Jody started in the travel industry at Thomas Cook Travel in San Francisco where she spent 7 years learning the industry and travel agency operations. She then moved to a newly created position at Bio-Rad Laboratories as an onsite agent and assisted in consolidating their travel program with the Travel Manager.

Her next career change was to BTI Americas (now BCD Travel) where she moved into an Account Management position for a new customer in the networking industry. This position allowed her to use her operational background and analytical skills to assist this customer in achieving a Best in Class travel program. She later moved into a regional management position with BTI and worked with several of BTI's larger global customers. She was a member of the global Account Management team at BTI which established consistent processes and procedures for their global customers.

After 2 years as the Travel Manager for an electronics engineering company, Jody accepted the position of Director, Global Travel and Corporate Aviation at Gap Inc., where she has been for the past 7 ½ years.

Jody's responsibilities include: establishing travel policies and procedures and communicating them to all employees; negotiating and managing agreements with all travel suppliers (including airlines, hotels, ground, online booking tool, TMC); and managing all aspects of their corporate aviation program.
